About

Bradley Bengtson, MD

While there have been many improvements in tummy tuck procedures, most patients remain unaware of the numerous advancements that have resulted in a smoother healing period after surgery. Performing more than 150 tummy tucks a year, Dr. Bradley Bengtson is renowned for his body contouring expertise and entrepreneurship. "State-of-the-art abdominoplasty today includes a number of advancements, such as Exparel®, a long-acting anesthesia medicine that numbs the entire area for the first 48 hours. It is placed by our anesthesia team while the patient is asleep," he says. "We have also just launched a new surgical drain substitute called Interi that can help eliminate seroma or fluid collection under the skin which can affect healing." Leading the way in ultrasound research, he's also developed a system that can both image and follow breast implant patients and look for seroma fluid under the skin. These new technologies and innovations will benefit countless patients and surgeons around the world.

"This is what innovative and state-of-the-art tummy tucks and body contouring look like."

State-of-the-Art Results

This 41-year-old patient desired fuller, natural-looking breasts and a flatter stomach. Dr. Bengtson performed a breast lift and tummy tuck to give her the beautifully contoured shape that she had always wanted.
